

50 Years Later Backcountry Skiing Returns to Sheldon Chalet in Denali National Park, Alaska From March to June 2021

Images Old and New

Denali National Park, Alaska (October 21, 2020) In the 1960's, the famous Sheldon Mountain House welcomed local Alaskans to ski under the summit of Denali. This ski season will look a lot like those simpler times. No lift lines, no crowds and endless opportunities to carve turns, make the return of skiing in Denali at Sheldon Chalet the perfect base for the ultimate backcountry skiing experience. The remote offering provided by Sheldon Chalet includes your private gear fitting, custom backcountry skis with skins that make it easy to ascend, guides to take you out and explore the open terrain and an epic private mountain experience available from March to June. Imagine a 35 square mile amphitheatre with untouched pristine powder all around and skiable lines as far as the eye can see, you've never experienced a ski vacation like this before.

After an avalanche and glacier preparation training course, set out with expert guides to create fresh tracks among the powder coating the glacier surrounded by Alaska's rugged wilderness. Skiing in Denali National Park is a Backcountry alpine touring and skiing experience. You will depart Sheldon Chalet and ski-tour your way to the slopes. Once there you'll trek or "skin" up the slope in a zig-zag pattern until you reach the designated stopping point selected by your guides. Once there, you'll take off the "skins" that assisted with the trek across the glacier and up the slope, lock your binding in place and then carve epic turns. As the day ends, return to Sheldon Chalet for a sauna, gourmet dinner, the spectacular glow of the northern lights, sparkling night starscapes and a luxurious night's sleep.

Starting at $35,500 per couple for a 3-night minimum, guests can relax, socially distance and experience Denali grandeur at this eco-conscious chalet in a way that's never been seen before. This ultimate experience includes gear, two adventure guides, a concierge, a chef preparing gourmet meals with premium wine pairings, guided glacier adventures and the helicopter flight tour to and from the Chalet. At Sheldon Chalet, guests can enjoy guided exploration and adventure in the 35 square mile Don Sheldon Amphitheater and enjoy incredible snowshoe treks with prime views of the summit of Denali just ten miles away.
